Super Bowl Bash

Are You Ready For Some Football! The students in Room 304 certainly were. During the football season this year we tracked 7 NFL teams. Each week the kids had to find out who their team was playing, where in the United States they were playing, and what the score was. Then they filled out a Football Score Sheet and we played "Monday Morning Quarterback" each Monday. We learned lots of geography, practiced our math, and "just plain old" had fun with this activity. Well, when the Super Bowl came around, we just had to hold our own Bash - especially since one of our teams, the Pittsburgh Steelers was in it this year. We had a fun filled afternoon even though our beloved Patriots had to sit this one out. There is always next year!

With the help of parent volunteers, we traveled to 6 different centers throughout the afternoon.

We ended the day with cheers to lead our teams on to victory!

This center had the kids making pom poms and pennants with our favorite team's logo and colors, then they wrote cheers.

Tail gating also proved to be a popular activity for the kids where they enjoyed meatball subs, nachos, veggies and dip, and cupcakes.

The kids at this center played finger football making sure to keep track of their score. The ref had fun, too!

Pigskin was the most popular center. The kids took chances with the roll of the die trying to get the highest score

We were all quarterbacks as we called plays on Backyard Football and a game on the NFL for Kids website.

We learned a new game called Quick Count which challenged the kids to use their math skills to get their team to the end zone. The kids were completing passes, running the ball, kicking field goals and stopping their opponent's big play all with a 54-card deck of cards. Thanks to the Spellmans, the owners of the company who overnight expressed the game to us so that we could have it in time for Super Bowl Friday.

They even sent us a second deck for free!
